More than 50 years ago on April 28, Workers Memorial Day, the Occupational Safety and Health Act went into effect, promising every worker the right to a safe job—a fundamental right. As we grieve those we have lost from unsafe working conditions, we must fight to protect our right to a safe job.

WE MUST:

- Guarantee all workers have a voice on the job to raise safety concerns and the right to freely form a union without employer interference or intimidation.
- Defend the right that all workers can choose their own representative during an OSHA inspection.
- Increase efforts to protect Black, Latino and immigrant workers who are disproportionately affected by and especially targeted for speaking up against unsafe working conditions.
- Increase job safety agency budgets and improve job safety enforcement.
- Win new protections against heat illness, workplace violence, silica exposure in mining, infectious diseases, exposure to asbestos and other toxic chemicals, and other preventable hazardous exposures.
- Pass the Protecting America's Workers Act (PAWA) to provide OSHA protection to the millions of workers without it, stronger criminal and civil penalties for companies that violate job safety and health laws, and improved anti-retaliation protections.
- Defend hard-won safety and health protections and workers' rights from attacks
